

William Gordon, MD, MBI is an internist and clinical informaticist at Brigham and Women's Hospital and Mass General Brigham in Boston, Massachusetts. Dr. Gordon has spent more than a decade working in healthcare information technology, and has written extensively on information security, interoperability, data standards, and digital product development. He is currently faculty in the Division of General Internal Medicine and Primary Care at Brigham and Women's Hospital, the Department of Biomedical Informatics at Harvard Medical School, and he is the Director of Solution and Experience for Digital Care Transformation at Mass General Brigham, where he leads a product management team tasked with building virtual care programs. Previously, he was head of Clinical Product at Kyruus, where he directed the company's clinical product lines. He has also served in advisory roles for the Office of the National Coordinator for Health IT. Dr. Gordon is an attending physician in the hospital medicine unit at Brigham and Women's Hospital and an Instructor in Medicine at Harvard Medical School.